Follow these tips to stay on the right lane. 1. Use Modern Templates Unlike many other types of newsletter design, when designing a newsletter or a bulletin for a church you need to be extra careful about how you approach the design. Because with one simple mistake you could end up offending an entire group of people. So, when in doubt, it’s always best to use a pre-made template that’s been already crafted to perfection by professional designers. This will allow you to stick to industry standards and easily create an effective newsletter without much effort. 2. Create a Minimalist Content Layout Using a minimalist content layout is usually the best approach for designing a bulletin or a newsletter, especially since it allows you to effectively plan and format text and images more clearly without cluttering the overall design. 3. Add Attractive Images Also, make sure that you leave plenty of space on your newsletter pages to add lots of visuals, photos, and illustrations to make the newsletter more attractive to younger audiences. If you’re using a template, you’ll be able to easily place your own images using image placeholders as well. 4. Use Bold Fonts Especially when it comes to designing church bulletins, consider using big bold fonts to attract the attention of your audience. Craft the titles and subheadings of the bulletins using such fonts to make them clearly visible from a distance. 5. Add a Call to Action (CTA) Whether you want to attract more people to a sermon, promote a special church event, or raise funds and donations, be sure to include a call to action on your bulletin design that gives clear instructions on how to take action. Keep text concise and decoration minimal, so that your message can be as clear as possible.Absolutes - Contrast is one of the primary principles of design. Including a mix of big and small text, light and dark colors, thin and thick shapes, and so on will guide the readers’ eyes through the different sections.Importance - Decide what you want readers to notice first, then second, then third, and so forth. Use the types of contrast in the previous point to create a visual hierarchy that makes it obvious where viewers should be looking.Neatness - Break information into bite-size sections and group related sections together. Use margins and a simple grid to make sure everything is organized and lined up consistently.Type & Images - Keep text size and font the same across paragraphs and headlines, and try to stick to 1-2 fonts. When incorporating an image, be aware that it will draw a lot of attention, so make sure to choose a clear, quality image that matches the message they are representing.
